Renowned genealogist Robert Barnes will shed light on frequently overlooked records that document death and probates. Drawing on his fifty years of experience, Barnes will explore certain scenarios in which researchers may not be able to locate death or probate records themselves, and how the study of other materials, such as census records, can uncover references to deaths in Maryland.

Future speakers include:

May 18, 2013- Tanner Sparks, Allison Seyler, and Alex Champion (MSA Staff), Know Your Rights: Lost Slaves, Proving Freedom, and Earning Pensions in 19th Century Maryland

ABOUT ROBERT BARNES

Robert (Bob) Barnes, M.Ed., F. M. G. S., is a writer, researcher, and lecturer. He holds the master's degree in Education from what is now Towson University. In June 1995 he retired from teaching after 36 years in the Baltimore City schools. Thereafter he worked part time at the Maryland State Archives as a Reference Archivist and still does extensive research there. He has been tracing Maryland families since 1960.

He is the author of many source books, compiled family histories and guides, including Maryland Marriages, 1634-1777; Maryland Marriages, 1778-1800; Maryland Marriages, 1801-1820; Baltimore County Families, 1659-1759; and Guide to Research in Baltimore City and County. Among his recent works are two volumes of British Roots of Maryland Families, Maryland Marriage Evidences, 1634-1718, Colonial Families of Maryland: Bound and Determined to Succeed, and Biographical Data from Baltimore Newspapers 1817-1819.

He is the verifying genealogist for the Society of the Cincinnati in Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution. He has lectured and taught courses in genealogical research. He has been recognized as an expert witness in the field of genealogy by the Circuit Courts of Baltimore City and Montgomery County.
